PARIS — The man who ran up the stairs of the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris and threw a hammer into a giant wooden book was finally caught Monday, after more than a decade on the run, French media said. A man was detained in a public library in the city of Boulogne-sur-Mer, near Paris, for damaging more than 11 million books by breaking windows and climbing a staircase to launch a hammer at a 20-foot-tall book, according to the Paris prosecutor's office. Two hours after the suspect was detained, the Paris prosecutor's office released a statement saying "the man was identified as Jacques Larti." It gave no further details, but The Associated Press cited French media reports, saying he was the son of a fireman and was 41 years old. Mr. Larti, who had been on the run since 2001, was arrested in the town after his arm was found in a car that was discovered during a police patrol of the area, The Associated Press reported.
