I have this line of code: private void LoadConfig(string json) { var deserializedConfig = JsonConvert.DeserializeObject(json); } When I run this, I get a nice list of available options for serialization/deserialization. However, there's no introspection for JsonConvert. I know that some of the Json.net libraries use late-binding to access the info, but I don't have access to the Json.net source and so can't fix it myself. Is there another way
